Case Was Adjudged.

The man who gave his name as Weiland and was charged with obtaining money by issuing checks on banks where he had no accounts, was up before Justice Fritzinger on Friday and asked for an adjournment which was granted until the 30th inst. Weiland wrote two checks on one of the local banks which he passed at the Arat restaurant. Weiland is a man of ordinary intelligence and looks as if he knew better than to get into the clutches of the law on such a trivial excuse.

Was a Good Band.

D'Urquhart and his band of thirty-five musicians gave four concerts at Daly's Theater on Wednesday and Thursday, and there were enough people at the four concerts to make one good house full. The band was a good one and was entitled to better patronage than it received. The Italian method of rendering music is different from most American leaders, but notwithstanding this fact the music was well worth listening to.

Entertained the Teachers.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Staff entertained the teachers of the public schools on Wednesday evening at their home on First avenue. Don't miss attending this free baking school.

Representatives of the K. O. Baking Powder will call at your home and tell you of its great merit. Ask them to show you the Janet McKenzie Hill "Cook's Book." It contains the finest collections of choice recipes ever compiled. It is beautifully illustrated.

Charged with Serious Offense.

Adam Brush was arrested on Tuesday afternoon by Chief of Police Welch on a charge of having broken into a freight car on the Wisconsin Central track, and taken out two packages of dry goods. After the officers got Brush he admitted that he was the person that had entered a car on the same road last summer and stolen some things, among which were a French horn that was being shipped to this city by T. A. Taylor.

The fact that Brush was captured was more a piece of good fortune than anything else. When the theft was committed last summer the company sent a detective here who looked the ground over and not finding anything that gave him a clue, decided that it was one of the employees of the road, but did not arrest him, as the young fellow he picked out to be the thief had never been suspected of anything crooked and all of his fellow workers had perfect confidence in him.

When the theft was discovered Tuesday morning a couple of letters were found near the car door with the name and address of Adam Brush on them, and upon the local police being called they decided that the letters had dropped from the pocket of the man who had been in the car, he having dropped them when he jumped from the car door. Working on this theory they discovered that there was such a man here and that he was a young fellow who was at work on the street car line, and that he had been here during the summer but had gone away and returned later on.

Upon being arrested he admitted that he had not only committed the burglaries with which he was charged, but also others that the officers knew nothing about. Upon being taken before Justice Fritzinger on Tuesday evening he waived examination and the justice bound him over to the circuit court.

A Chance to Go to West Point.

Congressman E. A. Morse has an appointment to make to West Point, and has decided to hold a competitive examination for this cadetship in the city of Antigo at the teachers training school on December 17. Prof. O. O. Marsh will conduct the examination, mark the papers and report to Mr. Morse the standings of the applicants. The boy having the highest standing will get the appointment, regardless of wealth, position, religion or politics. No candidate will be admitted to West Point who is under 17 or over 22 years of age, nor less than five feet four inches in height at the age of 17, or five feet five inches in height at the age of 18 and upwards. All candidates should be in good health and strong physically.

Mr. Morse will be glad to send a boy desiring to take the examination printed information relative to the appointment of cadets to the United States Military Academy. The examination will commence at nine o'clock in the forenoon.

Shot His Father.

Joseph Milezinski of the town of Dewey, Portage county, was shot on Saturday night by his son Frank, who inflicted a wound on one of his father's hips from which the old gentleman died soon after. Before his death the father made a statement in which he claimed that the attack by his son was wholly without provocation and that he did not strike the boy nor had he ever whipped him during his life. The boy is eighteen years old, and was having a quarrel with his mother at the time of the shooting.

Miss Blanche Cleveland has accepted an engagement as musician in the Ideal theater.

Christmas Stamp Sale Begins Monday, Nov. 29.

On next Monday morning, Nov. 29, the new Wisconsin Christmas stamp campaign of the Wisconsin Anti-Tuberculosis Association will formally open.

"Stamp on the white plague" will be the cry of the crusaders as they march the length and breadth of the state to sell 3,000,000 of the little holiday greeting stickers at a penny each to raise funds for continuing the anti-tuberculosis battle so auspiciously begun during 1908.

By midnight of Dec. 31, New Year's eve, the entire 3,000,000 stamp must be sold. Wisconsin will then maintain its rank as one of the leading fighters in the world-wide crusade against tuberculosis. The people must not let it fail.

The Wisconsin Christmas stamp, a true emblem of the Badger state, will be on sale in every city, village, and hamlet in Wisconsin on Monday morning. Five thousand trained workers will be actively engaged to push the sale under the direction of Stanley A. Douglas, campaign manager, 111 Goldsmith building, Milwaukee. Every one is giving the best effort unselfishly, sacrificing money and time in the good work.

Every teacher and every pupil in the schools will be hand at work. Stamps are now being shipped out in large quantities, in response to hundreds of advance orders from local campaign managers. Among the first orders is one for 50,000 from local manager Earle A. Cleveland at Escanaba. Every manager will be supplied, so that everything will be ready for a whirlwind start Monday morning.

All cities of 2,000 and over are eligible to compete for the big prize of an Aero vacuum cleaning system, valued at between $300 and $1,000, donated by the American Aero Cleaning Co. of Milwaukee.

The city selling the largest number of stamps in proportion to its population in the 1908 campaign, will be adjudged a winner. The winning city's campaign committee will select the school in which the Aero system is to be installed, with the advice of an expert engineer from the American works.

The company has also donated an Aero system, to be awarded to the school in Milwaukee which sells the most stamps in proportion to the average attendance.

The Good Roads Matter.

The Tribune acknowledges the receipt of a pamphlet entitled "Good Roads the Way to Progress." It contains a lot of good reading matter for any man, whether he is interested in the betterment of country roads or not, for if he is not interested in it he should be, and the matter is one that will bear studying by all.

There are a great many of the roads in this immediate vicinity that are never very bad, but there are many in the county that are among the worst when the weather is just right, and these are the ones that should receive the attention first.

There are some farmers who argue that it makes no difference to them whether the roads are good or bad. That if they raise 300 bushels of potatoes and sell them for 50 cents a bushel they will get a hundred dollars out of it whether they haul them to town over good roads or bad ones. If the matter stopped right there it is possible that it would make very little difference. But it does not stop there. The average farmer makes many trips to town during the year and there are times when it makes considerable difference whether he can make the trip in an hour or half a day. If it does not make any difference how long such things take he is rather a shiftless sort of a farmer and will never amount to anything, anyway, for a farmer is just as busy as any other man and the more hours he can save the more money he can make.

The Standard Oil company has been ordered to discontinue business. The courts hold that it is an unlawful combine and it has been directed to wind up its affairs and discontinue business. Well, maybe it will, and then again, maybe it won't. Some time ago one of the judges who was trying a case against the Standard Oil company, fined that corporation the magnificent sum of twenty-nine millions of dollars. We kind of felt sorry for the company and old John D., but we found out later that our sympathy had been wasted. It would have been a lot of money if they had ever been compelled to pay it, but they didn't. So this last decision would be a serious set-back to the company if they ever paid any attention to it but the chances are that another court will be found that will reverse the decision of the first court, and there you are.

Reduction in Millinery.

Hats and everything will be sold at reduced prices during the month of December. Miss S. V. Rudberg, West Side, South of the bridge.

Matt Carey, D. B. Pidllo and Anna Hasbrouck were in Appleton on Monday to attend the annual meeting of the Oneida Oil Co. Messrs. Pidllo and Hasbrouck left from there for a trip thru the oil fields before returning home.

Mrs. David McGowan and children leave today for Ladysmith, where Mr. McGowan has been located for several weeks past and where they expect to make their home.

Mrs. O. E. Krause departed on Monday for a visit with relatives in Duluth.

The Girl and the Clown.

The amusement committee of the Federation of Women's Clubs have selected Mr. Charles Payne and wife to give a production of this musical comedy the character to be taken by the young folks of our city, the comedy to be given at Daly's Theatre next Friday evening.

Mr. Payne has been giving this musical throughout the state the past summer and has met with big success. The papers have given it the highest praise.

The opening and closing choruses have been given special praise, the two song hits in other towns have been "Crazy about a Brass Band" and "April Mids."

All ages of people enjoy the antics of a clown, and Mr. Payne who takes that part promises to keep the audience laughing throughout the evening. Over sixty of our young ladies and children are taking active part. There will not be a dull moment from the rise to the fall of the curtain but something "doing" all the time.

Asylum for Marshfield.

The county board at its session on Friday decided to locate the insane asylum at Marshfield, the matter having occupied their attention for some time at different periods during their meeting. The institution will be located on the Northwestern and Wisconsin Central railroads about two and one-half miles from Marshfield. It is expected that the committee will buy about 600 acres of land, as this is the minimum amount which they have been empowered to purchase.

The soil in that section is first class, probably as good as can be found anywhere in the state, and the location should prove an ideal one for an institution of this sort. The committee having the matter in charge has been empowered to conduct the work at once and it is probable that by the time spring comes they will be ready to put up the necessary buildings.

Enjoyed a Venison Supper.

About fifty members of the Elks lodge assembled at their hall on Monday evening and indulged in a venison supper. The venison was furnished by Dr. Blanchard and Handel, Olan, Natwick, Attorney J. J. Jeffery, Henry Sampson and P. G. Gilkey. Besides the feasting there was music during the evening furnished by Charles Natwick, Dr. Bandelin and Dr. Blanchard on the violin, clarinet and guitar, while a number of others present rendered vocal selections. The evening was a very pleasant one and was enjoyed by all.

We should like to see Theodore Roosevelt in the United States senate. It might enable the country to get the real measure of the man. Therefore Mr. Roosevelt has had the advantage of seeing his views on every subject under the sun from the inside to the outside. Having seen him without having seen him talk back on equal terms. In the senate it would be different. The ex-president would find himself on an equal basis with men every one of whom has been as himself. We imagine that a debate between Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. La Follette or Ben Tillman, or Mr. Bryan, if he is sent to the senate from Nebraska, as now seems probable, would be highly interesting and that the former president would find it an entirely different proposition than recruiting the membership of the Anatolia club from the pedestal of the white house.

A Leading Educator on the International Live Stock Exposition

Here is what Dean Davenport of the Illinois Agricultural College says of the International Live Stock Exposition of Chicago, which is to be held at the Union Stock Yards from Nov. 27 to Dec. 10:

"Not one, not even those responsible for its development, has adequate conception of the influence of the 'International' upon American live stock interests. As a practical farm educator it cannot be surpassed; as a stimulus to trade, it has no equal; as a means of shaping policies and correcting trends, its influence is supreme."

"A decade or two ago such a thing would not have been possible in this country. It seems incredible now that a company organized primarily for business should see its way to expend so much time, energy, and money in the establishment of such an exposition. That it will pay there is no doubt. The pay will come in a thousand ways. The live stock interests will be more prosperous; the individual farmer who lives by it will be more successful, and the multitude of interests that depend upon live stock will thrive the better for it."

"The marvel of it all is that such a thing could be at all. It shows the change of the commercial spirit in this country, the generosity of live stock men, and the readiness of the American farmer to respond to modern methods and conditions."

"What should be said of the man who does not go? That he is blind to his own best interests is certain; that he will get behind in the race and be lost in the shuffle is no less true; that the young man who will come on after him will ultimately possess his herds and his land, goes without saying. This is the age when every business must be studied, and farming is no exception, indeed it looks more and more as if farming were coming to be one of the most complicated professions and that the more is learned of it the more complicated it becomes."

"Let the 'International' live long and prosper. This certainly will be true. The only uncertainty is how much good will individuals cut out of it. This rests entirely upon them and depends upon whether they attend the exposition or whether they stay at home and find fault with what they have not helped to accomplish. May they and others go."

The Payette-Boise Project.

United States Reclamation Service.

The Government made no mistake when among the many irrigation projects of the U. S. Reclamation service for the reclamation of arid lands it included the fertile Payette and Boise valleys. About 347,000 acres of land will be reclaimed and the contemplated work calls for no less than eight storage reservoirs on the head waters of the Payette and Boise rivers. This system will comprise 400 miles of main canal, 1,000 miles of laterals, 20 miles of power transmission lines, and the development of 12,600 horse power.

Idaho has long been famed for its fruit, and the region to be benefited by this great irrigation project is as fertile and attractive as any in the Gem State. The lands are located in Ada Canyon and Owyhee counties, and have a general elevation of 2,600 feet. This is volcanic soil, easily worked and wonderfully productive. An Idaho farm produces from 5 to 7 tons of alfalfa per acre in three cuttings; 4 to 6 tons of clover; 50 bushels of wheat, and 75 bushels of oats on the same acre. Apples and prunes yield astonishing crops, and command the highest prices paid in the eastern markets. Grapes are found in every town, and sugar beet culture is one of the most profitable industries in the state. Idaho claims to have less wind and more sunshine in the winter than any other state in the Union.

Missouri's Best Cow.

Princess Charlotte, a Holstein cow in the dairy herd of the Missouri College of Agriculture, gives more milk than any other cow in Missouri. In the last year she gave 18,405 pounds of milk, or 1,300 gallons. From this 727 pounds of butter was made.

"This cow shows the advantage of using good stock in a dairy." O. H. Eckles, professor of dairy husbandry at the University of Missouri, said. "At the present price of milk in Columbia, 7½ cents a quart, she would have brought her owner $300 for this year. A cow with a record like that is worth about $1,500. This is more than 40 per cent income, looking at it as an investment. Princess Charlotte produced as much milk as five ordinary farm cows. The five cows probably would cost $200 to feed. The same advantage is gained as by using an efficient machine instead of an ordinary one. The upkeep is greater, but the results are worth it."

"A person's average daily consumption of milk is one third of a quart. On this basis Princess Charlotte could have supplied the milk for a hotel with seventy-five guests."

Have you whitewashed your stable yet this fall? Yes, have you ever whitewashed them? By the appearance of some, and, worse still, the looks of some of the cattle around the county it looks as though a visit from one of our dairy inspectors were necessary. Are you prepared to have him come?

Some silo facts: "The silo and the dairy belong together. There is no doubt that ensilage increases the production of milk 20 to 25 per cent. Ensilage increases the corn crop one hundred per cent over the old system of feeding dry corn. With ensilage every bit of the feed is digestible. With dry feed it is different."

Agricultural Extension Service for Farmers.

To give more of the 200,000 farmers of Wisconsin direct and specific aid in solving their farm problems is the purpose of the agricultural extension service of the College of Agriculture of the University of Wisconsin, which has been expanded and developed along new lines. This service now embraces about 40 distinct lines of work which are being done by the departments of the college, in addition to research and instruction, to promote better farming in the state. This work is designed to give the results of experiments conducted at the experiment station to farmers of the state to be put into immediate beneficial use and through personal visitation, correspondence, cooperative demonstrations and experiments to solve local farm problems through the aid of station experts.

How to Secure This Aid

The lines of work described below are each conducted by the departments mentioned, and any farmer of the state who is interested will get full information upon addressing the department at the College of Agriculture at Madison. As far as possible the group system will be followed, through which a number of farmers in a locality will be made a unit for advice or demonstration, in order that the maximum number of farmers may be reached.

Where peculiar local problems arise special experiments will be conducted by the station staff where such work seems justifiable. Minor problems will be discussed by the departments through correspondence. Carefully prepared answers with available bulletins on the subject will be furnished in every case.

The regular bulletins of the Agricultural Experiment Station will be sent to any farmer in the state upon receipt of a request describing the line of farming followed, addressed to the director of the Experiment Station, Madison, Wis.

We should like to see Theodore Roosevelt in the United States senate. It might enable the country to get the real measure of the man. Heretofore Mr. Roosevelt has had the advantage of airing his views on every subject under the sun from rural wildlife to nature faking without having some one talk back on equal terms. In the senate it would be different. The ex-president would find himself on an equal basis with every one else as brilliant as himself. We imagine that a debate between Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. La Follette or Ben Tillman, or Mr. Bryan, if he is sent to the senate from Nebraska, no now promising, would be highly interesting and that the former president would find it an entirely different proposition than recruiting the membership of the Amateur club from the poloists of the white house.

A Leading Educator on the International Live Stock Exposition

There is what Dana Donovanport of the Illinois Agricultural college says of the International Live Stock exposition of Chicago, which is to be held at the Union Stock Yards from Nov. 27 to Dec. 10:

"Not one, not even those responsible for its development, has adequate conception of the influence of the 'International' upon American live stock interests. As a practical farm educator it cannot be surpassed; as a stimulus to trade, it has no equal; as a means of shaping policies and correcting ideas, its influence is supreme.

"A decade or two ago such a thing would not have been possible in this country. It seems incredible now that a company organized primarily for business, should see its way to expend so much time, energy, and money in the establishment of such an exposition. That it will pay for itself is no doubt. The pay will come in a thousand ways. The live stock interests will be more prosperous; the individual farmer who lives by it will be more successful, and the multitude of interests that depend upon live stock will thrive the better for it.

"The marvel of it all is that such a thing could be at all. It shows the breadth of the commercial spirit in this country; the generosity of live stock men; and the readiness of the American farmer to respond to modern methods and conditions.

"What should be said of the man who does not go? That he is blind to his own best interests is certain; that he will be lost in the race and be lost in the struggle is no less true; that the young man who will come on after him will ultimately possess his herds and his land, goes without saying. This is the age without any business must be studied, and farming is no exception, indeed it looks more and more as if farming were coming to be one of the most complicated professions and that the more is learned of it the more complicated it becomes.

"Let the 'International' live long and prosper. This certainly will be true. The only uncertainty is how much good will individuals get out of it. This rests entirely upon them and depends upon whether they attend the exposition or whether they stay at home and had fault with what they have not helped to accomplish. May they and others go."

The Payette-Boise Project.

United States Reclamation Service.

The Government made no mistake when among the many irrigation projects of the U. S. Reclamation service for the reclamation of arid lands it included the fertile Payette and Boise Valleys. About 327,000 acres of land will be reclaimed and the contemplated work calls for less than eight storage reservoirs on the head waters of the Payette and Boise Rivers. This system will comprise 400 miles of main canal, 1,000 miles of laterals, 20 miles of power transmission lines, and the development of 15,500 horse power.

Idaho has long been famed for its fruit, and the region to be benefited by this great irrigation project is as fertile and attractive as any in the Gem State. The lands are located in Ada Canyon and Owyhee Counties, and have a general elevation of 3,500 feet. This is volcanic soil, easily worked and wonderfully productive. An Idaho farm produces from 5 to 7 tons of alfalfa per acre in three cuttings; 4 to 6 tons of clover; 60 bushels of wheat, and 75 bushels of oats to the acre. Apples and prunes yield astonishing crops, and command the highest prices paid in the eastern markets. Cranberries are found in every town, and sugar beet culture is one of the most profitable industries in the state. Idaho claims to have less wind and more sunshine in the winter than any other state in the Union.

Missouri's Best Cow.

Princess Charlotte, a Holstein cow in the dairy herd of the Missouri College of Agriculture, gives more milk than any other cow in Missouri. In the last year she gave 18,405 pounds of milk, or 1,300 gallons.

From this 727 pounds of butter was made.

"This cow shows the advantage of using good stock in a dairy," C. H. Eukles, professor of dairy husbandry at the University of Missouri, said. "At the present price of milk in Columbia, 7 1/2 cents a quart, $900 would have brought her owner $1,500 for this year. A cow with a record like that is worth about $1,500. This is more than 40 per cent income, looking at it as an investment. Princess Charlotte produced as much milk as five ordinary farm cows. The 18,405 pounds probably would cost $200 to feed. The same advantage is gained as by using an efficient machine instead of an ordinary one. The upkeep is greater, but the results are worth it.

"A person's average daily consumption of milk is one third of a quart. On this basis Princess Charlotte could have supplied the milk for a hotel with seventy-five guests."—From the Kansas City Star.

Have you white washed your stables yet this fall? Yes, have you ever white washed them? By the appearance of some, and, worse still, the looks of some of the cattle around the county it looks as though a visit from one of our dairy inspectors were necessary. Are you prepared to have him come?

Some silo facts: "The silo and the dairy belong together. There is no doubt that ensilage increases the production of milk 20 to 25 per cent. Ensilage increases the corn crop one hundred per cent over the old system of feeding dry corn. With ensilage every bit of the feed is digestible. With dry feed it is different."

One of our mail carriers spoke to us recently asking that we might call the attention of the public to the fact that the mail man's burdens would be lightened a whole lot if people would shovel the snow from their sidewalks promptly. It makes quite a difference in the amount of labor the mail man has to undergo if he has to wade thru the snow in delivering the mail, or whether the sidewalk is nice and clean. A correspondent to one of our exchanges puts up quite an argument concerning the matter of shooting hawks. He says that only about one out of the ten hawks that are killed by hunters and on which bounties are paid are birds that are destructive to chickens, and that the other nine kill enough mice and other vermin to more than make up for the few chickens that the so-called hen hawks kill. The correspondent also states that in some parts of the country, where the slaughter of hawks was carried to excess that mice and insects overrun the orchards and fields to such an extent that great damage was done.

Her Viewpoint.
St. Paul Dispatch.
(Being the passing thought of a Mere Woman.)

I've been asking a whole lot lately Of weighty affairs of state, And looking up the pedigrees Of the mighty and the great. I've studied the tariff question And conversation of late. But what I'd really like to know Is whether my hat's on straight. I've thought delectation Is a thing that's bound to hurt, And I'm glad to see that in Panama They're throwing a lot of dirt. I see that an eminent preacher Thinks women should really shirr, But what I'd really like to know Is: How do you like my skirt?

The question of irrigation Is not to be settled in haste—I'm strong for greater expansion. Now that we've got a taste: I believe in downward revision From silks and satins to paste. But what I started to ask you was: Now how do you like my waist?

I believe in suffrage for women— To the balloting Eve should go; I believe that a man with money Is no better than one with a toe. As to foreign complications I think we ought to go slow, But the thing that interests me most, Ahem!—does my petticoat show?

One of our mail carriers spoke to us recently asking that we might call the attention of the public to the fact that the mail man's burdens would be lightened a whole lot if people would shovel the snow from their sidewalks promptly. It makes quite a difference in the amount of labor the mail man has to undergo if he has to wade thru the snow in delivering the mail, or whether the sidewalk is nice and clean. People have to clean off their walks, anyway, so they might as well do it in time to accommodate the mail carrier.

A correspondent to one of our exchanges puts up quite an argument concerning the matter of shooting hawks. He says that only about one out of the ten hawks that are killed by hunters and on which bounties are paid are birds that are destructive to chickens, and that the other nine kill enough mice and other vermin to more than make up for the few chickens that the so-called hen hawks kill. The correspondent also states that in some parts of the country, where the slaughter of hawks was carried to excess that mice and insects overran the orchards and fields to such an extent that great damage was done.

St. Paul Dispatch.
(Being the passing thought of a Merop Woman.)

I've been asking a whole lot lately Of weighty affairs of state, And looking up the pedigree Of the mighty and the great: I've studied the tariff question And conversation of late But what I'd really like to know Is whether my hat's on straight. I've thought of deforestation Is a thing that's bound to hurt, And I'm glad to see that in Panama They're throwing a lot of dirt: I see that an eminent preacher Thinks women should really flirt, But what I'd really like to know Is: How do you like my skirt? The question of irrigation Is not to be settled in haste—I'm strong for greater expansion. Now that we've got a taste: I believe in downwind revision From silks and satins to paste, But what I started to ask you was: Now how do you like my waist? I believe in suffrage for women— To the balloting Eve should go: I believe that a man with money Is no better than one with a hoe: As to foreign complications I think we ought to go slow, But the thing that interests me most, Ahem!—does my petticoat show?

METCHNIKOFF'S MIRACLE.

Two years ago Prof. Metchnikoff, the director of the Pasteur Institute in Paris, promulgated his famous theory that a diet of sour milk would check the ravages of old age. Since then he has made additional researches resulting, we are told, in additional discoveries of inestimable value. In a word, the professor is now satisfied that he has discovered the cause of death and the means of retarding it, thus solving the problem of longevity. While his specific is still a secret, it is known that he proceeds on the principle that death is due to the formation of putrefactive bacteria in the large intestine and that for this process a corrective is within reach. The presumption is that inoculation is the method to be pursued. When man reaches his prime, instead of being permitted to take the downward slide, he will simply visit a laboratory, receive a vitalizing injection and remain, to all intents and purposes, immortal. The professor's experiments are so delightful that skepticism seems inevitable. Yet how many of us are there who, even on such impeccable authority as that of Prof. Metchnikoff, will nurse the golden dream of physical immortality? Both Christian teaching and the teachings of Nature herself point the other way.

Using the census of 1900 as a basis of calculation, it is estimated that the census of 1910 will show that the school population of the United States numbers probably 14,000,000 persons. The school year ten years ago was 13,367,147. Of that number 4,266,302 persons were between the ages of five and nine, and 4,653,394 ranged from nine to fourteen years old. About 13 per cent. of the whole number were from fifteen to seventeen years of age, and five per cent. were eighteen or upward. Of all the children between the ages of five and nine reported in the census of 1900 only about one-half attended school; of those ranging from nine to fourteen, four-fifths attended, and of those from fifteen to seventeen a little more than two-fifths. Upward of 90 per cent. of the entire number were white. A school army of 14,000,000 for 1910 will be a national asset worth having. It will constitute a more convincing demonstration of the country's resources and strength than an army of 1,000,000 adults equipped with rifles and cannon.

A severer penalty than a fine should be awarded by the law to the class of miscreants who make a point of inflicting the streets to insult respectable working girls. Young women who are compelled by the exigencies of life to support themselves, and who can choose neither the hour nor the place at which they must be on the public streets, should be especially protected from the assaults of the scoundrels who hold that the fact a woman is compelled to earn her living is legitimate cause for insult, says the Baltimore American. If there is one class of persons for whom the streets should be safe, it is the young working girls of the community, who, as a class, are deserving of sincere respect.

It is not unlikely that common sense will bring to market the mixture of tea and flowers which was one of China's state secrets when the dowager empress held the reins of power. The empress was almost as famous for her tea as for her grip on the government. All guests at court were permitted to drink of the old woman's favorite brew, and tea experts tried to match the blend after she had failed to warn the secret from servants in attendance on the empress. Every attempt, however, to produce as delicious a cup of tea failed, and it was not until after the empress' death that the secret leaked out.

The rapid development of the aeroplane suggests that it will not be long before some daring aviator will undertake to cross the Atlantic. It will be done, eventually, and the powerful modern steamship may yet find that its most formidable competitor will be not on the seas, but in the air.

Throughout the country there is a clamor for more laws. Some people seem to think that when an evil appears all that is to be done is to "make a law." It isn't more law that is needed. It is more of the law-abiding spirit in the people that makes the laws for themselves.

RESCUERS DESPAIR OF SAVING ENTOMBED MEN

DISASTER RANKS WITH WORST IN HISTORY

Flaming Load of Hay, Supposedly Caught from Miner's Torch, Believed Responsible for Catastrophe—Awful Happening Relieved by Glorious Deeds of Heroism, in Which Rescuing Party Lost Their Lives.

Cherry, Ill.—Science and desperation greatly checked the fire that had consumed more than 200 men and boys in the St. Paul mine on the afternoon of November 13, and Friday men braved the tunnels and brought four bodies to the surface. Miners have been put to work in the galleries, rescuing the buried lives and clearing obstructions which impeded access into the coal veins for more than two hundred and fifty feet from the main shaft. Beyond this point intent fires still burn.

Five bodies of the entombed have been recovered, four of them Friday and one Thursday night. More were found and explorers were forced to flee for their lives, as they were about to bring them out, when falling earth and rock endangered them.

The bodies which were recovered were identified as Henry Kroll, 62 years old, and Alfred Kroll, 15 years old, father and son; George McMillen, 37; Charles Wallis, aged 32, and Ollie Freiberg.

Thirteen Chicago firemen, commanded by Capt. Kennedy and Lieut. Smith, did the heavy work in making it possible to enter the mine. Obstacles which threatened the lives of the firemen attended the work of recovery.

The bodies of the men who were working in the second level were almost cut off from escape by a sudden falling of masses of earth and rock.

Eleven brave men were trapped alive in a vain attempt at rescue. Out of 665 miners, according to the mine records, who were lowered into the mine in the morning 181 were saved, many of them by the small but heroic band of rescuers who perished in their efforts until they themselves perished.

The elaborate ventilating machinery which pumped flying oxygen into the levels 500 feet below the surface was burned out, cutting off practically all chance for life.

Shafts Sealed; Last Hope Gone. Even the slender chance that the men entombed might yet be rescued was lost by the sealing of both shafts of the mine for the purpose of smothering the flames.

This last step was taken only after vain efforts had been made to conquer the flames by pouring tons of water down the main shaft.

Gave Lives in Scorn of Death. The eleven heroic rescuers who died were:

John Bundy, manager of the second vein; Rudolph Clark, miner; Tom Flood, Toluen, Ill., mine foreman; Dominick Fermento of Cherry, Ill., grocery clerk; James Jamison of Cherry, Ill., miner; the Lewis of Cherry, Ill., livestockman; Alexander Nourberg, mine manager of third vein; James Shears, miner; Harry Stewart, miner; John Szarbelinski, alderman; Joseph Yearley of Springfield, Va., miner.

In order to determine if possible whether there were any living beings in the mine the shaft was unsealed and a large sized iron bucket was lowered, but it was brought up to the surface empty. This bucket, which in large enough to hold several men, was dropped several times in the hope that some might be living and be able to crawl to it.

Horror Price of Negligence. If reports current here are correct, some individual or individuals—probably one of the mine officials who later lost his life in attempting the rescue of his imprisoned workmen—were negligent.

Reports which vary in their details, agree in the essential that the fire started in some way which had been lowered to the second level. The way in which the hay caught fire is said to be: A torch carried by Alexander Rebeck, eager on duty at the second stage, exploded, the torch exploded and scattered boiling oil over the surroundings.

He tried to put out the flames but was unsuccessful. The flames were as dry as tinder and the fire communicated to the stable and the hay. Thus the flames spread rapidly.

James Hanney, a miner, is said to have reported fire in the mine at 1:30 o'clock, but no attention was paid to his report until the fire became so violent as to lead the mine. It was while the mine was warning up that the few survivors, with the aid of the 11 rescuers, made their way to the surface.

The greater number of the 187 had escaped by leaving the mine at the noon hour—before the fire started.

Brave Hearts Respond to Call. Smoke came out of the escape shaft at its mouth at two o'clock in the afternoon. The engineer in charge of the cages failed to get up any signals from below to pull up. Then 12 men—Dr. Joshua Howe of Cherry recommended the rescuers in their first descent—volunteered to go into the mine to rescue the men below.

Flood and Lewis were the first men to step forward and their comrades in the glorious exploit soon followed.

They entered the cage of the downcast shaft and the engineer opened his throttle and dropped them the 500 feet into the earth as rapidly as he dared. There was a brief wait, when the stacked cable told that they had reached the bottom, and then a frantic signal to pull up.

The cables seized on the drums until the cage with the rescue party rose to the top of the sinking shaft. The rescuers were all there, but there were no rescued. The rescuers had failed to reach anybody and had rushed back for air.

Choke, Gas, and Then Return. For a few minutes the brave men choked and gasped in the open. Then they re-entered the cage. Again the engineer stood at his levers and the cable whirled over the drums. Again the signal to pull up, another frantic effort to take the first step of scaling back shafts of the mine, cutting off all hope of anybody surviving in the huge underground furnace.

It was a generally acknowledged impossibility to even consider taking out bodies of men without first smothering the fire.

Charles McDonald, one of the men who was rescued, told a harrowing story of the fire in the depths below and of the rush to the elevator shaft.

Wins in Dash for Life. "It was shortly after one o'clock," said he, "when a load of hay came down to the second vein where I was working. There were probably 250 men in this vein. The hay was for the mules and they have been sending the stuff down that way for some time. Nobody paid any attention to it."

"All of a sudden there was a yell from one of the men and I saw smoke coming from the hay. Quick as possible I started for the hay with a number of other men."

"Before we got there it was all on fire and there was no chance of putting it out. Then there was a rush for the elevator shaft. Everybody was scared almost to death and men ran over each other in getting to where the cage stops."

"I fought my way to the opening and fought back the men who were trying to crowd me out. We waited and it began to get hotter. Then the elevator came down and got me and I don't remember anything else."

selous near the entrance of the elevator and they believed that by a quick trip many more lives could be saved.

The big cage containing the men who were to sacrifice their lives was quickly lowered down the shaft.

It stopped at the entrance of the second vein. For three minutes the engineer operating the elevator at the surface waited for the signal to hoist. It did not come. Realizing that something had happened the engineer quickly threw on the power.

As the cage continued to rise down the narrow shaft the flames roared and it is believed the horror within as heard is testified in a kitchen utensil. The engineer, John Cowley, stood at his lever until the cage was out of the top, but he heaved up not living men but blistered corpses.

Reaches Open Air Only to Die. Every man was dead except one and he breathed his last five minutes after the cage came to the surface. He was Tom Flood, a mine vein manager.

The elevator, it is believed, reached the surface when the fire was beginning to take hold of the shaft. Flood and the men were either burned or suffocated. Dr. J. D. Howe, the regular mine physician, attempted to save Flood's life, but he was badly burned and died without regaining consciousness.

Fan Reverses and Hope Dies. The terrible loss of life was indirectly caused by the reversing of the big fan which supplies air to the two big veins of the mine.

When the fire was first discovered it was thought that the blaze could be drawn out by the fan.

The reversing of the fan shut off all the air in the shafts below and also drew the flames up the air shaft. The fire came out with such fury that the fan itself was burned almost immediately.

A man of horror went up from the crowd, which realized that unless the rescue was brought to the surface within a few moments they would die from suffocation.

No Man Could Live There. All knew that without the fan working it would be difficult for any man to live ten minutes in the lower levels of the mine.

There were five hours more of frantic but ineffectual effort to stop the fire. At eight o'clock it was found that the rescue was hopeless.

STRIPS SENT TO NICARAGUA

TWO CITIZENS OF UNITED STATES ARE EXECUTED.

Taft Orders Gunboats to Zelaya's Country When Informed of Execution of Americans.

Washington.—A diplomatic tangle of great breadth and of almost endless possibilities has developed within a few hours. Two Americans are believed to have been executed in Nicaragua by order of President Zelaya, two American warships are being rushed to that country and President Taft is holding back indignantly the new Nicaraguan minister's presentation.

Indignation point to complications that may upset the peace of Central and South America. Should present reports receive full corroboration, the United States government will deal with this situation with an iron hand, according to intimations from a high source.

Leonard Grace and Leroy Cannon, Americans, captured while serving with the revolutionary army in Nicaragua, have been sentenced to death by President Zelaya's orders, and it seems certain that sentence has been carried out. The cruiser Vicksburg has been ordered to Corinto and the gunboat Des Moines will proceed at once to Port Limon to observe events there and report the situation by wireless telegraph.

The meeting between President Taft and the new minister from Nicaragua, Indurain, has been postponed indefinitely.

Passengers are arriving here from Nicaragua report that a reign of terror exists throughout the part of that country controlled by President Zelaya. Government troops are rounding up all persons suspected of sympathy with the revolutionists, and executing them without trial.

More than 600 persons suspected of revolutionary sympathies are said to have been summarily shot, and still the bloody work continues. Residences are ransacked by Zelaya's soldiers in search of incriminating letters and evidence, and when resistance is offered the houses are destroyed.

Women relatives of revolutionary sympathizers have been subjected to indignities.

METCHNIKOFF'S MIRACLE.

Two years ago Prof. Metchnikoff, the director of the Pasteur Institute in Paris, promulgated his famous theory that a diet of sour milk would check the ravages of old age. Since then he has made additional researches resulting in a more complete discovery of the cause of death and the means of retarding it, thus solving the problem of longevity. While his specific is still a secret, it is known that he proceeds on the principle that death is due to the formation of putrefactive bacteria in the large intestine and that for this process a corrective is within reach. The presumption is that inoculation is the method to be pursued. When man reaches his prime, instead of being permitted to take the downgrade, he will simply visit a laboratory, receive a vitalizing injection and remain, to all intents and purposes, immortal. This promise so extended is so delightful that kepticisms seem to be a thing of the past. Yet how many of us are there who, even on such impeccable authority as that of Prof. Metchnikoff, will nurse the golden dream of physical immortality? Both Christian teaching and the teachings of Nature herself point the other way.

Using the census of 1900 as a basis of calculation, it is estimated that the census of 1910 will show that the school population of the United States numbers probably 14,000,000 persons. The school army ten years ago was 13,357,147. Of that number 4,256,302 persons were between the ages of five and nine, and 6,453,394 ranged from nine to fourteen years old. About 15 per cent of the whole number were from fifteen to seventeen years of age, and five per cent were eighteen or over. Of all the children between the ages of five and nine reported in the census of 1900 only about one-half attended school; of those ranging from nine to fourteen, four-fifths attended, and of those from fifteen to seventeen a little more than two-fifths. Upward of 90 per cent of the entire number were white. A school army of 14,000,000 for 1910 will be a national asset worth having. It will constitute a more convincing demonstration of the country's resources and strength than an army of 1,000,000 adults equipped with rifles and cannon.

A severer penalty than a fine should be awarded by the law to the class of miscreants who make a point of inflicting the stigma to insult respectable working girls. Young women who are compelled by the exigencies of life to support themselves, and who choose neither the hour nor the place at which they must be on the public streets, should be especially protected from the scoundrels who hold that the fact a woman is compelled to earn her living is legitimate cause for insult, says the Baltimore American. If there is one class of persons for whom the streets should be safe, it is the young working girls of the community, who, as a class, are deserving of sincere respect.

It is not unlikely that commerce soon will bring to market the mixture of tea and flowers which was one of China's state secrets when the dowager empress held the reins of power. The empress was almost as famous for her tea as for her iron grip on the government. All guests at court were permitted to drink of the old woman's favorite brew, and tea experts tried to match the blend after they had failed to worm the secret from servants in attendance on the empress. Every attempt, however, to produce as delicious a cup of tea failed, and it was not until after the empress' death that the secret leaked out.

The rapid development of the aeroplane suggests that it will not be long before some daring aviator will undertake to cross the Atlantic. It will be done, eventually, and the powerful modern steamship may yet find that its most formidable competitor will be not on the seas, but in the air.

Throughout the country there is a clamor for more laws. Some people seem to think that when an evil appears all that is to be done is to "make a law." It isn't more law that is needed. It is more of the law-abiding spirit in the people that make the laws for themselves.

A chicken in Illinois has left her brood to care for seven colic pups. It is obvious in this instance why the hen crossed the road.

The snail must get a lot of consolation these hot days from not being obliged to wear that awfully high hat any more.

RESCUERS DESPAIR OF SAVING ENTOMBED MEN

Flaming Load of Hay, Supposedly Caught from Miner's Torch, Believed Responsible for Catastrophe—Awful Happening Relieved by Glorious Deeds of Heroism, in Which Rescuing Party Lost Their Lives.

Cherry, Ill.—Science and desperation greatly checked the fire that imprisoned more than 300 men and boys in the St. Paul mine on the afternoon of November 13, and Friday men braved the tunnels and brought four bodies to the surface. Miners have been not to work in the galleries replacing the burned timbers and clearing obstructions which impede access into the coal veins for more than two hundred and fifty feet from the main shaft. Beyond this point latest fires still burn.

The dead who were recovered were identified as Henry Kroll, 62 years old, and Alfred Kroll, 15 years old, father and son; George McMullen, 30; Charles Walte, aged 22, and Ollie Freilinger.

Thirteen Chicago firemen, commanded by Capt. Kennedy and Lieut. Smith, did the heavy work in making it possible to enter the mine. Obstacles which threatened the lives of the firemen attended the work of recovering the bodies. At one time the men working in the second level were almost cut off from escape by a sudden falling of masses of rock and rock.

The elaborate ventilating machinery which poured life-giving oxygen into the levels 500 feet below the surface was burned out, cutting off practically all chance for life.

Shafte Sealed, Last Hope Gone. Even the shaft might have been rescued by the sealing of both shafts of the mine for the purpose of smothering the flames.

This last step was taken only after vain efforts had been made to control the flames by pouring tons of water down the shaft.

Gave Lives in Scorn of Death. The eleven heroic rescuers who died were:

John Bundy, manager of the second vein; Robert Clark, miner; Tom Flood, Tuluca, Ill., mine foreman; Deminick Ferment, miner; John Gromicki, miner; James Jamison of Cherry, Ill., miner; Joe Lewis of Cherry, Ill., miner; Alexander Nourberg, mine manager of third vein; James Shears, miner; Harry Stewart, miner; John Szarbinski, alderman; Joseph Yearley of Spring Valley, mine foreman.

It was determined if possible whether there were any living beings in the mine the shaft was unsealed and a large sized iron bucket was lowered.

HOW THE HEROES DIED

In the annals of the world's heroic deeds few achievements are recorded more glorious than those accomplished by the 11 rescuers at the St. Paul mine before they themselves died.

They saved 185 miners before their fate overtook them.

Six times they were lowered into the burning mine, leaving the cage they entered into the body of the mine, lifted up the miners as they found them, and sent them to the top, some in the cage, but many, one by one, up the air shaft bound singly in chairs.

The first man was saved at 2:30. At 4:30 the man at the wheel of the hoist engine started the cage up on its seventh trip. It had been below four minutes, but no signal had been sent. The engine man, however, dared wait no longer.

The cage came up fast, but faster came a burst of flame and the flame came to the level of the ground. Ten of the eleven heroes already were dead.

The eleventh, Tom Flood, still breathing, was dragged from the heap. He was able to articulate a little.

"The flame caught us," he gasped. Then he, too, was dead.

Dedicate Battle Shaft. New Orleans.—A trip on the river, a ride over the city and luncheon at the Country club were among the features of entertainment of a party from Massachusetts headed by Gov. Draper. The party will dedicate the Massachusetts monument in the national cemetery at Baton Rouge.

Police to Learn Liu Jitsu. London.—Presenting a marble clock to a young man named Sidney Williams for assisting a constable when he was surrounded by a hostile crowd, Superintendent Jenkins referred to the violence to which the police of the city were often subjected, and said vision were making arrangements with a police instructor to give police lessons in jiu-jitsu. He hoped that would lead to a reduction in the number of assaults on the police of the city.

May Clear Up Sea Mystery. Long Beach, Cal.—The body found in the sea November 2 is thought to be that of Charles Crummett of Seamount, Kan. The man's mother received a letter from him saying he was going on a tour from which he might never return.

Shoots Girl and Himself. Spokane, Wash.—Buried because Florence Pierce refused to marry him, James Lenox shot the girl and himself in a hotel. The girl will live, but the man will die.

Japan to Change Naval Base. Peking.—A Tokyo report is current in official circles that Japan intends to abandon Port Arthur as a naval station. This will make "Chin Hai Bay," Korea, the principal naval base of the mikado's empire.

Funeral of Marquis Des Monstres. Louisville, Ky.—The funeral of the Marquis Des Monstres, of Louisville, Ky., will be held here. Burial was at Cave Hill cemetery.

Five Warships Guard Manuel. Cherbourg.—King Manuel of Portugal sailed for England Monday aboard King Edward's yacht, Victoria and Albert. The yacht was escorted by four English cruisers and a French battleship.

The big cage containing the men who were to sacrifice their lives was quickly lowered to the shaft.

It stopped at the entrance of the second vein. For three minutes the engineer operating the elevator at the surface waited for the signal to hoist. It did not come. Realizing that something had happened the engineer quickly threw on his power.

As the cage began to rise down the narrow shaft the flames enveloped it and broiled the heroes within as bread is toasted in a kitchen utensil. The engineer, John Cowley, stood at his lever until the car was at the top, but he hurried up not living men but blasted corpses.

Reaching the top, the men who had breathed his last five minutes after the cage came to the surface. He was Tom Flood, a mine vein manager.

The elevator, it is believed, reacted to the flames and the shaft timbers began to take fire. The men who were either burned or suffocated. Dr. L. D. Howe, the regular mine physician, attempted to save Flood's life, but he was badly burned and died without regaining consciousness.

Fan Reverses and Hope Dies. The terrible loss of life was indirectly caused by the reversing of the big fan which supplies air to the two big veins of the mine.

When the fire was first discovered it was thought that the blaze could be drawn out by the fan.

The reversing of the fan shut off all the air in the shaft below and also drew the flames up the air shaft. The fire came out with such fury that the fan itself was burned almost immediately. A moan of horror went up from the crowd, which realized that unless the miners were brought to the surface within a few moments they would die from suffocation.

No Man Could Live There. All knew that without the fan working it would be difficult for any man to live ten minutes in the lower levels of the mine.

There were five hours more of frantic but ineffectual effort to stop the time. At eight o'clock it was found necessary to take the final step of sealing both shafts of the mine, cutting off all hope of anybody surviving in the huge underground furnace.

It was a generally acknowledged impossibility to even consider taking out bodies from the mine without first smothering the fire.

Wins in Dash for Life. "It was shortly after one o'clock," said he, "when a load of any same came down the shaft where I was working. There were probably 250 men in this vein. The hay was for the mules and they have been sending the stuff down that way for some time. Nobody paid any attention to it. All of a sudden there was a yell from one of the men and I saw one coming from the shaft. Quick as possible I started for the hay with a number of other men.

"Before we got there it was all on fire and there was no chance of putting it out. Then there was a rush for the elevator shaft. Everybody was scared almost to death and I saw one of the other men getting to where the cage stops.

"I fought my way to the opening and fought back the men who were trying to crowd me out. We waited and it began to get hotter. Then the elevator came down and got me and I don't remember anything else."

Since the removal of the Spanish friars the church has been greatly handicapped by the dearth of clerical workers.

STRIPS SENT TO NICARAGUA

TWO CITIZENS OF UNITED STATES ARE EXECUTED.

Two citizens of the United States were executed in Nicaragua when informed of execution of Americans.

Washington.—A diplomatic tangle of great breadth and of almost endless possibilities has developed with Nicaragua in a few hours. Two Americans are believed to have been executed in Nicaragua by order of President Zelaya. Two American warships are being rushed to that country and President Taft is holding back in definitely the new Nicaraguan minister's presentation.

Two Americans are believed to have been executed in Nicaragua by order of President Zelaya. Two American warships are being rushed to that country and President Taft is holding back in definitely the new Nicaraguan minister's presentation.

There is an unmistakable atmosphere of high tension at the department of justice and the treasury department. Developments are following each other with startling rapidity.

James B. Reynolds, formerly assistant secretary of the treasury, and now a member of the new tariff board, declared there never had been any attempt on the part of the American Sugar Refining Company to influence any action of his and no instructions had been issued by him having any object in view beyond good administration and fair dealing to all concerned.

Mr. Reynolds' statements were made as the result of publications to the effect that the treasury department under the administration of President Roosevelt displayed apparent indifference in procuring evidence of alleged "sugar trust" frauds, and that Richard Parr, a special agent of the department, in his investigations had encountered obstacles from the outset.

CAIRO SHERIFF IS REMOVED

It is Probable Deposed Official Will Be Reinstated After an Investigation.

Springfield, Ill.—Sheriff F. R. Davis of Alexander county, from whom the Cairo mob took the negro James and Lynched him, has been removed from office by Gov. Deneen.

The governor acted under the mob violence act of 1905 which leaves him no discretion. He must declare the office vacant when the sheriff loses a prisoner, but the act provides that the deposed official make an investigation and if convinced the sheriff did all in his power to protect his prisoner re-instate him.

It is predicted that Davis will be reinstated, though the governor would not admit it.

HOME AGAIN.

Explanation of Small Boy That Must Have Greatly Reassured the Anxious Mother.

"I've just spanked Ned. I don't know what comes over you with your little boy," remarked the mother's intimate friend.

"What have the boys been up to now?" was the timorous query.

"About the very last thing you'd imagine. They've been eating lunch on the Italian laborers' workmen along the street tracks. And you might as well know the worst at once—they've been eating meat cooked in a shovel."

With a frantic vision of a hopelessly germ-ridden child, Stephen's mother called her interesting heir to speedily account.

"I didn't eat lunch on any meat," Stephen indignantly persisted. "Those men are all my dear friends. And I didn't eat any meat cooked in a shovel either."

"What did you eat, then?"

"Only some gravy cooked in a shovel," said the boy.

Then perceiving the wild alarm in the maternal countenance, "But it was clean all right, mother, for I saw the man wipe off the shovel with his hat before he poured in the gravy."

A Hero.

Tommy's mother had made him a present of a toy shovel and sent him out in the sand lot to play with his baby brother. "Take care of baby," said she, "and don't let anything hurt him," was mamma's parting injunction.

Presently screams of anguish from baby sent the distracted parent flying to the sand lot. "For goodness sake, Tommy, what has happened to the baby?" said she, trying to soothe the wailing infant.

"There was a naughty fly biting him on the top of his head, and I killed it with the shovel," was the proud reply.—Exchange.

Undoubtedly Not.

Capt. Jerome, while visiting Col. Higginson, took a deringer from the table, and asked: "This thing loaded?" But before the colonel could reply the deringer was discharged, the bullet tearing away one of the fingers of the visitor. The colonel, who is widely known on account of his extreme politeness, bowed gracefully, and rejoined: "Not now, my dear captain."

WARRINER GOES TO JAIL

Friends Fail to Bail Out Defaulting Treasurer—Warrant issued for Arrest of Mrs. Ford.

Cincinnati.—Charles L. Warriner, former local treasurer of the Big Four railroad, is in jail and a warrant has been issued for the arrest of Mrs. Jeanette Stewart-Ford, on a charge of receiving $1,000 of the $643,000 which Warriner is accused of having embezzled.

The warrant against Mrs. Ford was issued upon application of Prosecutor Hunt, who had been informed by Warriner that he had given part of the money he is alleged to have abstracted to Mrs. Ford and that the last payment he had made was on October 1.

Warriner's bail was fixed at $20,000 and the four friends who had come to his assistance when first arrested did not put in an appearance and the former treasurer was compelled to go to jail.

THANKSGIVING in the HOLY LAND

CELEBRATED BY QUAIN AND ANCIENT CUSTOMS

THE average American has an idea that Thanksgiving is a national holiday peculiar to his country and celebrated because of proclamations issued by the president and by governors of states, whereas the feast of Thanksgiving is observed in many other countries. One of the many interesting observations of this feast is found in the Jews in Jerusalem, though it is celebrated in a very different manner from that which we are accustomed to think of as Thanksgiving.

While we here celebrate the day by discontinuing all business and giving an entirely new day to the Thanksgiving dinner, in the far east the Thanksgiving is combined as a religious service for several days, though accompanied by much merry-making, during which all business is suspended. The ancient Hebrew people, who were once the masters of this land, presented to him for centuries, the feast of the Holy Land, its prosperity and abundance of its sacred sites, the most beloved of all being the beautiful temple built by King Solomon.

SAMARITAN HIGH PRIEST

are now strangers in their own land, admitted on to the sacred soil only with reluctance by the masterful Turk.

Chiming to the memory of their glorious past, drawn near to each other because of their common love for their peculiar traditions and for their "Torah"—their souls—through the ages they gather in colonies as near as possible to sites which by right through inheritance, though not granted them by the usurpers of their land. Even through the centuries from century to century, persecuted for their religion and massacred by the injustice of racial prejudice, they now flock to their own country, selling all they possess to pay the voyage and come to look upon the land where their fathers and prophets and to die and be buried on holy soil.

When once the Turk has let them enter in his port he is a friend to them up to a certain limit. But, alas! Their most sacred sites are all in his zealous care, and the keys are held in his tightly closed hands so that the places they crave most to gaze upon are forbidden ground to them. They can only stand without and weep.

Sorrowfully they gather as near as they are permitted to the old wall of their beloved temple. Notwithstanding his gray hairs and bowed figure, his sad face filled with the woes of a sorrowful people, and eyes which speak of the suffering of centuries, the Hebrew is looked and feared if he ventures too near to sites which the deeds of his ancestors made glorious and memorable to all the world. Though if he respects those boundaries set by the infidel and is content to worship his God upon such space as is allotted to him he has perfect freedom and religious liberty.

The three greatest feasts in which the Jew remembers his past and fulfills in all the details possible the old Mosaic law in the land promised to Moses so many centuries ago are the Passover, Tabernacles and Pentecost. It is at the feast of Pentecost that he feels most keenly the fact that he is a stranger in his native land and rebels and groans at the Turkish rule for he can no longer offer the paschal sacrifice in the temple on Mt. Zion—for upon its site stands a gorgeous mosque, where only Islam bends the knee and bows the head in adoration to Allah and Mohammed. Yet there are times when the Jew in his own ancient land rejoices and is glad.

With thanks to his God for the existence today of his race—will set apart—and with great festivity he commemorates God's wonderful preservation of this people and celebrates the remarkable events in their history. He is elated at the privilege of being able to celebrate his own feasts in the place where they were instituted and this is entirely possible at the feast of Thanksgiving, for it is a festival for the synagogue and the home and there are no obstacles in the Holy Land to the fulfilling of every letter of the law in regard to this celebration. Setting care and business aside, he dons his handsomest gown and goes to the synagogue, which has also been decorated in festive attire, and with a thankful heart he enters into a service which is all joyousness.

The principal feature of this feast of Thanksgiving others prefer to build it on the flat roof of the house. The first thing to do is to procure the materials with which to build it. Let us imagine ourselves in Jerusalem a few days before the feast. It is autumn, yet the sun shines brightly in a clear, blue sky, shedding a genial warmth, which makes outdoor life still very pleasant. It is eight o'clock and the men are returning home from the early morning service in the synagogue.

The baying of donkeys in the street proclaims the fact that the materials for building the booth have arrived. For the donkeys are laden with large bundles of long, green reeds, or hollow canes, some similar in shape to the sugar cane, but harder and stronger, and others with laurel or sweet bay, myrtle and other green and scented plants. The reeds are fresh cut and still covered with leaves. The family set to work immediately to remove the leaves and to sort the different sizes and thicknesses, cutting them all the required lengths. Then the construction of the temporary domicile begins.

There are specific rules to be observed. The booth must not be round or circular, but of four corners—that is, square or oblong; and the roof and walls must let in light and air. There should be no windows, but as many doors of entrance as is practicable. Putting up the corner pillars and joining them strongly with stretchers, the rest is formed of pretty lattice work, and in intervals the stems of green plants are inserted, which are made to cover the walls and roof, the leaves projecting inside and out. For the arched doors the choicest branches are selected. Then comes the decorating of the booth, and the women suspend glittering lamps from the roof and silk and damask curtains, hanging in graceful folds on the walls within and before the entrance. It is not the season of the feast, according to the command, "Ye shall dwell in booths seven days; all that are Israelites born shall dwell in booths." No meal must be eaten outside of it, visitors are received in it, and all religious exercises or reading must be held in it, unless driven out by rain; and it is considered a happy omen for the next year's harvest if it rains during any of the seven days.

The feast is a time of great rejoicings. Every one is attired in his handsomest garments and the Jewesses adorn themselves with all their rich jewelry and find gold-embroidered scarfs.

Services are also held in the synagogue throughout that time it travels only one one-hundredth of an inch.

When a man's leg is cut off, if the stump be irritated he feels the pain in his toes. This curious deception is the same as any one can practice on himself by striking his elbow on the table, when he feels the pain in his fingers. Of course, in both cases the pain is felt in the brain.

We do not actually perceive different distances with the eye, but judge them from various indications. When our judgment is at fault we are deceived.

If you see a person in a fog, for instance, he seems to be much bigger than usual.

The same thing happens when you see men or cattle on the top of a hill against the horizon in twilight. The child obeyed, and in the kitchen found an especially large red one which had been brought up the day before, so placed it on the dish with the others.

When they were passed this was the apple the minister took, and feeling it so warm, remarked to his host that the cellar must be very warm.

HEBREWS GREETING EACH OTHER

the week. On the first days of the week two scrolls of the law are brought out from their sacred place, which is a small closet in the wall, before which hang rich alien curtains, shimmering with gold and silver embroidery. The privilege of carrying the precious scrolls of the law up to the pulpit, as well as that of ascending to the pulpit to listen to the reading of the law, is even that of taking part in the service by reading aloud, is purchased by auction and the proceeds go to the support of the synagogue and its "chazan."

Another interesting custom is observed on this holiday. During the morning service every one who has a son born to him during the previous year has his babe brought to him for the first time to the synagogue, dressed, of course, in exquisite garment and accompanied by one or more large wax candles, painted in bright colors and wreathed with paper flowers.

They are carried aloft before the child and presented to the synagogue. It is the child's first "trip" will be offered to the service of God.

The synagogue is brilliantly illuminated for the week.

That is the case with the synagogue, and while full and perfect illumination is the rule of the synagogue, it is not the case with the home.

SCENE IN JERUSALEM

burn lamps and tapers in the daytime during worship. The walls of the synagogue are draped with the best tapestry—lent by wealthy Jewesses. In fact, the synagogue is never sayer or more beautiful than on this day of Thanksgiving.

Shortly after breakfast the girls and women, dressed up in all their beautiful finery, which their skillful fingers have wrought, and gaily decked with jewelry, issue forth in family groups, escorted by their brothers or male friends, to visit the synagogues. Boys and youths are already assembled in and about the synagogues, to see them come in and go out, the oldest girls being greeted with wishes for their marriage that year. They go up to the "Sepharia," the scrolls of the law, embrace and kiss them, looking shyly round the synagogue, and depart to make room for other groups.

Many marriages are brought about as a result of this visit to the synagogue. The whole week is a favorite time for arranging marriages by heads of families and for celebrating betrothals.

If a youth or a maiden in the home are of a marriageable age—are above 13 years—then the parents choose this feast as an appropriate occasion to plan for their marriage and even to solemnize the betrothal before the week of festivity be over, the "Succa" being a delightful and ornamental place for such a happy event. The rabbis have in charge the choosing of the right parties and arrange all matters with the parents and sometimes with the youths in question. The young girl herself has nothing to say on the subject.

When all has been satisfactorily planned to the approval of both sides of the families to be united, the ceremony is performed. Under the rustic leaf roof, surrounded by brilliant draperies and bright tapers, the young couple meet.

Whatever happy dowry the father can afford to give his daughter is mentioned, also what presents the bridegroom-elect has promised to bestow upon his bride. Holding the four corners of a large silk handkerchief, the rabbi, the father, the bride and the bridegroom answer to questions and listen to the reading of the contract.

Musicians then fill the booth with merry sounds and graceful dancers entertain the guests until a late hour. Thus ends a feast which, though permeated by religious feeling and picturesque ritual, is yet filled with joyousness and pleasure, beginning and ending with glad thanksgiving.

Chicago.—A plot originating in Spain to assassinate a number of well-known American financiers was brought to light through a series of mysterious letters sent to the various stock exchanges of the country from Barcelona, Spain.

Members of the Chicago stock exchange are reticent regarding the matter. The American men of finance, whose funeral various members of the stock exchange were invited in the black-bordered letters, are James B. Duke, the head of the tobacco trust; John H. Cobb, C. C. Dula, Pierre Lorillard, George A. Cress, August Belmont, Thomas F. Ryan and John W. Gates. All of the men have been interested in a more or less degree in the tobacco business.

At first it was thought the letters were from some fanatic, but their continuation and their viciousness caused them to be considered serious enough to warrant an investigation by the board of directors of the stock exchanges of Chicago, New York and other cities.

Outlook Discouraging.

Wareham Courier:—The outlook in the warehousing market is anything but encouraging. Either to the growers or dealers. Many growers are at a loss to know what the outcome is to be, whether they will be able to market the remainder of their crop at a profit, or whether they obtain. The market this year has been a falling one and country deals have been exceedingly hazardous to buyers. Many purchases have been made on which there was a loss owing to the downward tendency.

About ten days ago the price of flowers at shipping point was $6.50 per barrel. Now the price is $5.50, $5.00, or even lower.

Some are optimistic and believe that the low notch has been reached and that there will be an early improvement. Others can see no encouragement for higher prices in present indications.

After the ceremony a wedding dinner was served, after which the newly wed pair took the train for Green Bay where they intended to visit, as well as other cities in the state on their wedding tour, after which they will go to Leonard, N. "Buy Christmas Stamps" Says Gov. Davidson.

Milwaukee, Wis., Nov. 20.—"Let each one of us aid in this noble fight against consumption by buying as many of these little Christmas stamps as we can afford and put them on our correspondence and Christmas packages. Each stamp stands for the contribution of one cent toward wiping out consumption." This is the keynote of an impressive letter written by Gov. James O. Davidson to Stanley A. Douglas, manager of the Wisconsin Anti-Tuberculosis association's campaign to sell 3,000,000 Wisconsin Christmas stamps, between Nov. 29 and Dec. 31.

"I earnestly hope that the people of this state will come forward now and give the anti-tuberculosis movement their active co-operation and support," the governor continues. "Wisconsin has always been a leader in progressive work that has meant the upbuilding of this nation and its people, and there is, in my opinion, no direction in which its people can better concentrate their efforts than in this great war."

"From the report of the state board of health we learn that 2,500 citizens of Wisconsin die each year from consumption; that there are at present 10,000 men, women and children suffering from this disease in Wisconsin. Scientists in our great university and elsewhere assure us that tuberculosis is both curable and preventable. This why is not it cured and prevented? We are told that consumption can be eradicated in Wisconsin in ten years, provided that the people learn the facts concerning the disease and that suitable laws are placed upon the statute books and conscientiously enforced."

"The educational work carried on by the Wisconsin anti-tuberculosis association during the last ten months has been done with money procured from the sale of the penny Christmas stamp last fall. Great good has been accomplished and already there has been a decrease in the prevalence of the disease."

Manager Douglas is still in need of local managers in smaller cities, especially. Three million stamps are to be sold this year and the assistance of every person in every community is needed.

The schools will work to their utmost to win the Aero vacuum cleaning system donated as prizes by the American Air Cleaning Co. of Milwaukee. The prizes are worth about $1,000 each and one will be awarded to a school in the state and the other to a school in Milwaukee for selling the largest number of stamps in proportion to the population or attendance, giving each an equal chance.

Big Work at Rothschilds.

(From The Wausau Pilot.)

One of the sights of this section at present are the buildings of the Marathon Paper Mills company at Rothschilds, which are in process of construction. The amount of work done since commencing a few months ago, must be seen to be appreciated. The foundations for the big mill are nearly all built and brick work, in most instances, up to the second story and some parts are up to where the roof is being put on. There is to be no wood used in the mammoth building except in the window and door frames. The foundations are of concrete and the walls, from one and a half to two feet thick, of solid bricks. All supports for the floors and roofs will be of iron and the floors will be of concrete. When completed, it is buildings were placed in a row, they would cover over one-half a mile in length and an average of about 200 feet in width. In their construction, something like 7,000,000 brick will be used. There is so much activity there that it looks much like a suburb of Chicago, where a large building is being put up, with the streets all torn to pieces and the crowds of men hurrying here and there, and the many teams that are drawing up scrapers of dirt from the river bed. Great piles of sand and gravel meet the eye in every direction. Then there are cars full of dirt, hauled up from the river bed by a wire rope, operated by electric power. Much of the sand is used for filling, and the ground near the river is being raised to a higher level. Work has not been commenced on the big dam yet, but will be in a few days. There have been many dwelling houses erected, and there will be seventy-five built for the employees. This will make a village of considerable proportions. The village has been laid out and the avenues are named after the men who are prominent in the enterprise, such as Alexander avenue, Yawkey avenue, Winton avenue, Brown avenue, etc. The main street is 100 feet wide. The main avenue is to be lined on both sides with trees and laid out by Neal Brown.

There are now 400 men at work at Rothschilds, besides a large crew cutting timber and clearing out the bed of the lake. The street railway runs to the mill and hundreds of our people go down daily to see the great work as it proceeds. Those who have not been down should go at their first opportunity. It is worth the trip as it is the greatest enterprise ever undertaken in the valley.
